Questions about parenting?

Welcome to our consultation service!

Obviously, all our children are little darlings!
However, we don't need to tell mothers or fathers that raising a child isn't always simple.

Usually, a parent instinctively knows how to react, but there are probably moments of doubt. You ask yourself questions and you feel less confident.

At those moments the parenting support consultation service may be just what you need.

Examples:

- Mary is two years old and sometimes throws tantrums. When she doesn't get what she wants she destroys her toys. You don't quite know how to react.
- You are exhausted because four month old Naïma cries a lot. You want to discuss with someone how you could deal with the problem in a different way.
- Kenny is 18 months old and wakes several times during the night. You are tired and your patience is being tried.

Parents with children up to the age of three may contact the parenting support consultation service with their story and questions about parenting. You can discuss your situation with an assistant of 'Kind en Gezin' (Child & Family) who is trained in giving pedagogical advice.

This can occur in a single conversation or in the course of a few conversations (no more than five) lasting approximately one hour. He or she will help you find a solution and will certainly help you on your way. Such a consultation can offer genuine help.

This service provided by 'Kind en Gezin' is free of charge.
